MAN FROM HOME NEW PICTURE AT FT. ARMSTRONG

"The Man From Home," which enjoyed a long run as a stage play, is to be seen as a picture at the Fort Armstrong tomorrow, featuring the new program "Find the Woman," which will have its last showing tonight. There is a fine cast in "The Man From Home," including James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson, Geoffrey Kerr, Norman Kerry, Dorman Kerry, Cummings, John Rubens, Annette Bensen, John Milton and Clifford Grey. The story of "The Man From Home" revolves around Genevieve Simpson, a society belle of Kokomo, Ind. Genevieve goes with her brother Horace for a three years' stay in Europe. She is an orphan, but, before his death, her father had appointed his best friend, Daniel Pike, as her guardian and entrusted him with control of her considerable fortune until she should come of age. Daniel loves Genevieve and on the evening before her departure she admits she loves him, too. The three years pass and bring many changes. Daniel has steadily risen and been elected as state senator. Genevieve and Horace have forgotten the simple people of Kokomo. They meet Prince Giovanni Chiaromonte, his son Leone and his daughter Sabina, in Italy, degenerate scions of an ancient but bankrupt nobility. Leone, who counts upon the American girl's dollars to build up their fortune again, proposes marriage and is accepted. Horace writes to their guardian for his consent for a marriage settlement of $750,000.

Meanwhile Leone is having trouble with Faustina, the beautiful wife of a fisherman, who is as faithful to her as she is faithless to him. Faustina's jealousy is aroused by Leone's attentions to Genevieve. She resolves upon revenge. On receiving Horace's letter Pike decides to investigate. He arrives at Simpson's hotel where a king who is traveling incognito and to whom he has been of assistance on the road.

Matt Moore is to be seen in his latest picture, "Reported Missing," at the Garden, in Davenport.

In vain Daniel tries to convince Genevieve that there is too much money in the business for his liking. Faustina persuades Leone to meet her at her cottage for a final assignation one night when her husband is out fishing. She attempts to kill him. Leone struggles her, then escapes unseen. Ribiore on his return finds his murdered wife and is himself suspected of the crime. He takes refuge in the court yard of Pike's hotel and begs the American to save him. Pike believes the man's story and hides him with the consent of his friend, the king. In the latter's apartment, observed by Prince Giovanni and his daughter, they tell Pike that unless he gives his consent to the marriage and arranges the necessary settlement they will inform the police.

At Spencer Square

Richard Barthelmess in "The Seventh Day" will be featured at the Spencer Square tomorrow. The story is a simple narrative of the lives of New England fishermen in which the star's simple sincere manner of acting carries conviction. Louise Huff returns to the screen in this story as leading lady.

a loan, makes the announcement that the pearls are worthless. Leone suggests that they are willing to take a smaller marriage settlement. Genevieve indignantly cancels her engagement. Pike produces his friend (the king) with evidence which conclusively points to Leone as Faustina's murderer. Leone acknowledges he committed the crime in self defense and is led away by the police. Genevieve, convinced of the unworthy ambition that has hitherto blinded her to real affection, is well content to feel Daniel's arms around her once more and go back to Indiana with her man from home.

As a special added attraction there will be an expose of the sensational act of saving a woman in two. You will be shown how the trick is done.

OWEN MOORE IN LATEST COMEDY AT THE GARDEN

The first tri-city showing of "Reported Missing," starring Owen Moore, is announced to begin tomorrow at the Garden, in Davenport. It is described as a comedy of action and thrills. Richard Boyd (Owen Moore) comes into possession of the Boyd Shipping company by inheritance. This company has an option on a huge fleet of ships which is much sought after by a scheming oriental shipping magnate. Young Boyd, who has been an idler, does not seem to care whether Oman, the man in question, gets the ships or not. In fact, he doesn't seem to enjoy anything except a good time. The early scenes showing Boyd after a wild night are said to be full of laughs. Pauline Dunn, who is more than ordinarily interested in Boyd, determines to make him get down to business. She urges him to save the ships for America. Boyd agrees to this and gives his word that he will exercise his option. This infuriates Oman, who determines to kidnap Boyd. This he does and is compelled to also kidnap Pauline, who raises an outcry when Boyd is spirited away. The two are put aboard a ship which goes to sea with the intention of keeping Boyd out of the way until the option expires. A storm comes up and the ship is stranded.

Pauline's father demands that Oman return the girl. This the oriental agrees to do. He searches for the lost ship and upon finding it sails for home in his high powered boat with the girl aboard. In the meanwhile young Boyd is rescued by the crew of a battleship. He gives chase to Oman in a navy hydroplane. Oman wins the race, however, and makes the girl a captive, hoping to hold her and in this way force Boyd to give him the option. The young man, fearing for the girl, agrees to do this and goes to Oman's house to carry out his part of the bargain. However, on his way he advises some of his friends from the battleship of his intentions. They advise him to fight it out and not give up his option. With their assistance he succeeds in getting the better of Oman. In the fight at the house the oriental is killed. Boyd rescues the girl and later exercises his option. Supporting Moore in the picture are Pauline Garon, Tom Wilson, Togo Yamamoto, Robert

SHAMS OF SOCIETY SUNDAY OFFERING AT THE MAJESTIC

"Shams of Society" will be the picture offering at the Majestic tomorrow. The story is based upon the novel "Shams" from the facile pen of Walter McNamara. The plot revolves around a young couple who have wealth and position, but the husband neglects to provide his pretty wife with spending money and that causes the difficulties which form the basis of an engrossing story. Woven into the story is a touch of human interest in scenes that depict the home life of a Jewish family and a barnyard party. Barbara Castleton, Montague Love, Macey Harlan, Julia Swayne Gordon, Lucille Lee Stewart, Edward Davis and others appear in the cast.
